

Tell us the differences between uncontrolled and controlled

Uncontrolled components are form inputs whose state is managed by the DOM, whereas controlled components are managed by React. Controlled components are typically preferred because they provide a more predictable user experience, especially for form input validation and submission.