

Tell us the differences between uncontrolled and controlled components in

Uncontrolled components are form inputs whose state is managed by the DOM, whereas controlled components have their state managed by React. Controlled components are typically preferred because they provide a more predictable user experience and allow for form input validation and submission.