Tell us the differences between uncontrolled and control

Uncontrolled components are form inputs whose state is managed by the DOM, whereas controlled components are typically preferred because they provide a more predictable user experiment form input validation and submission.